GRAPHIC DESIGN

Kenzie Raulin Design started as a sole proprietorship in 1990, and has evolved as the design industry, and her life, has changed. She enjoys a growing demand for services as a creative problem solver and skilled designer. She brings over 30 years of experience to her work, progressing from a freelance practice to collaborations with design studios, to the creation of KRD. Clients include public and private sector organizations and many local non-profits.

COLLABORATIVE ART

Kenzie Raulin and Ruth Lozner have adopted a mode of working that is quite different from the traditional or even modernist model. They work collaboratively: equally sharing concepts and aesthetics, techniques and skills, experience and perspective, while working side-by-side on the same pieces at the same time. The evaluation of the work does not, by any means, hinge on the uniqueness of this process. Yet it is this very dynamic process that allows these artists to expand their own vision and capabilities and produce work that is provocative, beautiful and meaningful.

Certainly, there are various contemporary (and famous) examples of 20th century collaborations such as Warhol and Basquiat, Ernst and Tzara, Johns and Rauschenberg, Duchamp and Ray, Gilbert and George. The synergy created because of their partnerships inspired work that would not have been created if produced individually. Lozner and Raulin (LR) have also found themselves in this fortunate position of being engaged in a symbiotic, collaborative process with infinite creative possibilities. They have found it energizing, inspiring and highly productive.
